

The Department of Anthropology at Baylor University seeks a permanent full-time lecturer (non-tenure track) to teach four courses per fall/spring semesters in a thriving forensic science minor effective August 1, 2027. (January 1, 2027, start date is preferred). The ideal candidate will contribute to multiple courses in the current curriculum (see Forensic Science Minor | Baylor University Academic Catalog), serve as an advisor to the student forensic society, and mentor undergraduate students on research projects who have interests in forensic science. This appointment is a renewable 9-month full-time, benefits-eligible, teaching-focused position with a 6-year promotion path to Senior Lecturer for successful candidates and a 12-year promotion path to Teaching Professor for highly successful candidates (see: Policy on Full-Time Lecturers, Senior Lecturers, and Teaching Professors at Baylor University). Full description and application instructions can be found here: apply.interfolio.com/186896